Harlan J. Berk, Ltd. has presented an innovation in antiquities and numismatics for some time now. The system is simple. When you want an antiquity or coin in the sale, just bid the estimated price by phone or mail. We will send you the antiquity or coin immediately. No waiting for the closing of the sale. Any and all antiquities or coins not sold before the closing date will be sent to the highest bidder on March 9, 1995.

EXAMPLE—You bid estimate on an item valued at $100.00 and if your bid is the 1st to reach us, you will receive the item immediately. If on the other hand, you bid $75.00 on the same item and are still the high bidder at the end of the sale, the item will be mailed to you on the closing date, March 9, 1995.

If you are ever in the area, stop in and see us! Of course, it's best to call first.

|   |       | ISLANDS OF TROAS, TENEDOS  |  |      |
|   |       | The ancient literary tradition offers two explanations for the intriguing coin types of Tenedos. Aristotle related them to local law which prescribed decapitation as the punishment for couples convicted of adultery, noting that an executioner with a double-bladed ax stood behind the judge in court. Somewhat more credible is Pausanias' derivation of the coin types from the Tenedian foundation legend, a variant on the Phaedra myth. Tenes was the son of Cycnus by a first marriage, but his stepmother Philomene fell in love with him. Outraged, Cycnus sealed the two into a casket and set it afloat on the seas. It was miraculously cast ashore on an island, to which Tenes gave his name. After Cycnus learned of the miracle, he set sail for Tenedos to seek reconciliation. But when he put ashore, Tenes used his double-bladed ax to cut the mooring line, setting the ship adrift.-The relevance of this myth to the historical Tenedos is demonstrated by several facts: a cult of Tenes as civic founder which persisted to the latest period of the city's history; the proverbial phrase "ax of Tenes" as a metaphor for implacable wrath; and the dedication of double-bladed axes at Delphi by King Periclytus of Tenedos. The janiform head, according to Pausanias, represents Tenes and his consort, and the ax is their cult attribute. However the bearded head seems too mature to represent a son still living in his father's house, and so Ernest Babelon offered a third interpretation. As a famous center of viticulture, Tenedos had an annual festival of Dionysus. Thus the janiform head might represent either Dionysus Bimorphis, combining his bearded and youthful forms, or Dionysus and Ariadne. Dionysus was one of several gods associated with the double-bladed ax, especially in Thessaly. |  |      |

| 133. Attic Type, Tetradrachm, 15.54g. Probably overstruck on Rhodes tetradrachm. This coin is highly unusual in that it is of Rhodian weight but of the first Attic type. The explanation for this abnormality is that a Rhodian tetradrachm came to the mint through commercial channels and was simply restruck without being melted and made into a new Attic weight planchet. I use the example of a Rhodian tetradrachm because within a few years, Egypt discards its Attic weight coins for Rhodian issues to make trade with Rhodes and the rest of Asia Minor easier. Abt. #### REKA DEVNIA (RD), DORCHESTER, EAUZE HOARDS

As a reliable index of relative rarity, much like mintage figures for modern coins, we will sometimes cite the numbers of specimens of Roman silver coins found in these large hoards, which have been published as follows.

N. A. Mouchmov, Le trésor numismatique de Réka-Devnia (Marcianopolis), Sofia 1934 (81,044 coins, almost all from Nero's reform (64 AD) to Gordian III).

H. Mattingly, "The great Dorchester hoard of 1936", Numismatic Chronicle 1936, pp. 21-61 (20,748 coins, from Caracalla's introduction of the antoninianus in 215 AD to Valerian I).

D. Schaad et al., Le Trésor d'Eauze, Toulouse 1992 (28,003 coins, from Commodus to Gallienus and Postumus).

The commonest types are represented by up to 500 specimens apiece in these hoards; types that occur in less than about 40 specimens can be considered scarce, and those represented by fewer than about 10 specimens can be called rare. The representation of the various types in these huge hoards is obviously a reliable reflection of their commonness in circulation at the time the hoard was buried and also of the quantities of each type produced by the mint.

561. ANTONINUS PIUS; As, Rome, 12.54g, 149-150 AD; BM-1840-1842, C-565, Ex-Steinberg Sale #439. Obv-TRP XII Head laureate right/MVNIFICENTIA AVG COS IIII S C Elephant walking right.
 The Munificentia types of Antoninus Pius' twelfth tribunician year occur only on asses and on a medallion, suggesting that they may belong to the New Year's issue for 1 January 150, and therefore commemorate games that had been held in 149 or were planned for early 150. As Strack stresses, followed by Mattingly in BMC p. lxxviii, the occasion of these games was therefore probably not the 900th year of Rome which began in April 147 and ended in April 148, though this old interpretation is still often repeated. The crisscross pattern on the elephant on the reverse, particularly clear on our beautifully preserved specimen and seen also on the red slip bowl #623 below, recurs in other works of ancient art even when the animal is depicted in the wilderness, so evidently represents not armor or a decorative netting worn by the elephant in the arena, but merely the wrinkles of his hide. Pliny in his Natural History comments on the "latticelike skin" of the elephant.

Rare reverse type, in a very rare and historically significant variety: since the obverse legend on our coin is that usual in 166 but otherwise replaced by a shorter form without AVREL in 167, we can conclude that Marcus Aurelius' fourth largesse was probably distributed early in 167, ie. when Lucius Verus took up his third consulship on 1 January of that year. Our specimen, which comes from the H. P. Hall collection, Glendining 1950, lot 1520 and from Ratto 1912, lot 1631, is a restruck brockage: an incuse image of the obverse portrait is visible on the reverse. Fine brown patination. #### ANTIQUITIES

CARTHAGINIAN REDWARE

During the fourth century A.D. the Roman Empire experienced the transition from Paganism to Christianity and the institution of the Holy Roman Church. However, the deep-rooted Paganism was slow in dying, and for over a century the two sets of beliefs co-existed as socially acceptable religions. This overlap of idolatry is captured in the art of the period. In this group of ancient Roman pottery shards from North Africa there are examples of Pagan symbolism as well as stylized Old Testament subjects. Although it may seem through the many variations in this catalog that these types are plentiful, they are in fact rare. We were fortunate to acquire a collection formed over a fifty year period. We hope you enjoy this selection as well as the rest of the catalog.

622. Roman Red Slip Fragmentary Bowl; 4th-5th Century AD. Fragmentary bowl depicting a half-dressed female with outstretched arms, a seated lion, & the hind legs of a second lion. Between the female and the lion is the potter's stamp in high relief, "DOMINA VICTORIA". 7" High, 6 3/4" Wide . . . . . 600

623. Roman Red Slip Fragmentary Bowl; 4th-5th Century AD. Fragmentary bowl depicts powerful griffin, elephant, & lion all striding right. The crisscross pattern on the elephant represents his wrinkled skin; see our note on #561 above. 7" High, 7" Wide . . . . . 3700

624. Roman Red Slip Bowl; 4th-5th Century AD. Bowl renders a bearded male seated in a stylized chair reading a book. Below the seated male are two standing figures, one a female dressed in a long sleeveless tunic, the other a facing bearded male, possibly Solomon. Restored from fragments, 7 1/2" diameter. . . . . 800

625. Roman Red Slip Fragmentary Bowl; 4th-5th Century AD. Bowl depicts three Erotes, the central Eros stands holding a swan. All are situated in a stylized boat. Opposite the Erotes is a fourth Eros playing a harp while riding a dolphin. Also depicted is a palm tree & the Tree of Life. 6 3/4" High, 6 1/2" Wide . . . . . 700

629. Roman Red Slip Sherds; 4th-5th Century AD. Sherds render variations of Hercules.

According to the myth, King Eurystheus ordered Hercules to destroy and to bring back to Mycenae the lion of Nemea which for so long had ravaged all the countryside to the north. Hercules found that his arrows had no effect on the tough skin of the lion, but, as the beast sprang at him, he half-stunned it with his club, then seized the beast by the throat and killed it with his bare hands. As a symbol of his great victory Hercules is often depicted wearing the hide of the lion as his cloak.

Cerberus, a horrible three-headed hound who served as Hades' guard dog in Tartarus. He patrolled the shore of the river Styx in the underworld, and devoured both living intruders and fugitive ghosts. Best known for his role as the subject of Hercules' twelfth and final labor. When Hades told Hercules that he could take Cerberus back to the land of the living if he did so without using his club or arrows, Heracles grabbed Cerberus by the throat and dragged him up through a chasm that emerged in Mariandyne.

630. Roman Red Slip Sherd; 4th-5th Century AD. Sherd renders the three-headed hound Cerberus. 2 1/4" High, 2 1/2" Wide . . . . . 425

The relevant story of Jonah unfolds with Jonah fleeing from the wrath of God. He seeks refuge on a sea-bound ship. Once at sea, God conjures a furious storm to punish Jonah for his insolence. At his request Jonah's crewmates fling him into the sea where a sea monster swallows Jonah and holds him in its belly for three days and three nights. By his penitence and earnest prayers to God the sea monster casts Jonah forth on land to continue his mission. Jonah is given a second chance to set right the sinful city of Nineveh. In an effort to impress God Jonah declares that he will overthrow the city in forty days. However, during those forty days the king and the people of Nineveh repent, and God grants them forgiveness. Jonah is disappointed and angry for the pardon and for missing his chance to prove himself to God. He sits in a booth of woven boughs outside the city and waits in vain for the judgement he had announced.

631. Roman Red Slip Sherd; 4th-5th Century AD. Sherds renders variations of the Jonah Cycle.

| A. Restored bowl depicting complete Jonah cycle within the inner most tondo. Beyond the Jonah cycle is an outer circle formed by variations of Biblical stories each separated by large palm branches.   |      |
| The stories depicted are The Raising of Lazarus, Adam & Eve in the Garden of Eden, & Moses leaving Sarah pursuing his call to be the deliverer of Israel. There is another Biblical scene which cannot be positively identified for lack of the entire scene. The youth portrayed with a satchel slung over his shoulder may be Jeremiah who was called to prophesy as a youth, and continued in his missionary travels for forty years. Wonderful detail throughout with fantastic biblical content. 11 3/4" Diameter . . . . . | 4000 |

The following group of North African pottery sherds contains examples of wild beasts indigenous to the region such as lions, leopards, elephants, wild boars, etc. Most of these animals also have biblical significance. During the Fourth century AD, to which period these pottery sherds have been dated, Christianity was taking its root as an official and institutionalized religion in the Roman Empire. At the same time, the foundation of Paganism in Roman society was deeply rooted and far-reaching. Therefore, one could conclude that the animal representations on the following ancient Roman red ware sherds have all three indigenous, Christian, & Pagan significance.

639. Roman Red Slip Shards; 4th-5th Century AD. Sherds display different stylized lions who are most likely part of amphitheater motifs. According to the Bible, the lion was the symbol of 'strength,' of the 'tribe of Judah,' and of 'Christ' (Rev. 5.5).

| 640. Roman Red Slip Shards; 4th-5th Century AD. Sherds render striding dogs. Dogs are mentioned in the Bible as guarding the house (Is. 56.10), warding off wild beasts, as befitting a wild predatory animal, living on flesh and by rapine, even feeding on human flesh, as in the case of Jezebel. Its 'price' was an abomination to the Lord (Deut. 23.18),-possibly on account of its idolatrous worship by the Egyptians, but probably a consequence of its uncleanliness and general condemnation. |     |

Dated to the 6th month of the 41st year of Shulgi, second king of the Third Dynasty of Ur, c. 2053 B.C. 36 x 37 mm  | 500 |
| 666. | Clay tablet inscribed with eight lines of Sumerian cuneiform on obverse and reverse. Impressions of scribe's seal on both sides. Administrative document recording the receipt by Ur-Manni from the mill of 2 gur of barley as an offering for the goddess Ninsun. The seal inscription reads: "Adudu, son of Ur-Man[ni], priest of Ninsun." Thus the scribe was using his son's seal, an unusual procedure. From Umma in the south of Iraq. Dated to the 5th month of the 41st year of Shulgi, second king of the Third Dynasty of Ur, c. 2053 B.C. 36 x 37 mm  | 500 |
| 667. | Clay tablet inscribed with eight lines of Sumerian cuneiform on obverse and reverse. Both sides of the tablet were rolled with the seal Inimku, and on the reverse the three-line seal inscription is left clear, and part of the presentation scene. Administrative document recording the receipt by Ininku from Ird, from a certain threshing floor's grain heap, of 4 gur of barley meant as an offering to the Sanga-officia of Umma. Save for the slight damage to the edges, the tablet is in very good condition. From Umma in the far south of Iraq. Dated to the 1st month of the 7th year of Amar-Sin, third king in the Third Dynasty of Ur, c. 2040 B.C. 39 x 37 mm | 500 |
| 668. | Clay tablet inscribed with seven lines of Sumerian cuneiform on obverse and reverse, the surface rolled with the scribe's cylinder seal showing the seal inscription: "Ukkinni, scribe, son of Ur..." from E'urbindug by Ukkinni. From Umma, a Sumerian town close to the Gulf, dated to the 9th year of Amar-Sin, third king of the Third Dynasty of Ur, c. 2038 B.C. 43 x 43 mm  | 500 |

669. Clay tablet inscribed with six lines of Sumerian cuneiform on obverse and reverse. Administrative record about the receipt of 2 unidentified objects from Shu-Mamma by Agugu, who wrote this tablet. The two sides of the tablet were rolled with the seal of Agugu, and on the reverse the seal inscription is left clear. Also, the Sumerian mythological eagle Imdugud is visible to the left of the seal inscription, but the rest of the design is not preserved. The surface is worn away on one side of the tablet, but all of the inscription can be read. From Umma in the far south of Iraq. Dated to the 10th month of the 1st year of Ibbi-Sin, the fifth and last king of the Third Dynasty of Ur, c. 2028 B.C. 39 x 39 mm . . . . . 500

670. Clay tablet assembled from pieces and having some damage, inscribed with twelve lines of Sumerian cuneiform on obverse and reverse. Administrative record of quantities of various onionlike products being supplied as an offering from three individuals. From Umma, in the far south of Iraq. Dated to the 2nd year of Ibbi-Sin, the last king of the Third Dynasty of Ur, c. 2027 B.C. 55 x 48 mm . . . . . 500

671. Clay tablet inscribed with twenty-six lines of Sumerian cuneiform on obverse and reverse. It is an administrative document recording the domestic animals handed over on the 9th, 10th, and 11th days of the second month of the 3rd year of Ibbi-Sin, fifth and last king of the Third Dynasty of Ur, c. 2026 B.C., from the city-state of Umma to the central government of Sumer at the town of Puzrish-Dagan, near Nippur. For the 9th the numbers are 10 grain-fed sheep, 1 sheep, 1 female lamb of a certain kind of purpose, 11 lambs not otherwise specified, and 3 kids. The city-states of Sumer were organized under the Third Dynasty of Ur so that one of twelve had to provide offerings of this kind to the central point for one month of the year. This tablet deals with "the turn of Dagada, governor of Umma." But the tablet was written in Puzrich-Dagan, not Umma. A gash in the obverse, and more damage to the surface on the reverse, but the substance of the whole document can be reconstructed. 95 x 56 mm . . . . . 1000

ADDITIONAL FINE ANTIQUITIES

672. Etruscan Bronze Votive Statuette of a Naked Youth; 525-520 BC. Possibly Vulcan. The pose of the solid-cast figure is a variation of that of the Greek kouros. The youth stands with left foot advanced, both arms held tightly at his side. The head is egg-shaped, with ears set very high, the almond eyes widely spaced under the broad brow, the mouth small. The hair is divided into narrow crimped strands which form a fringe over the forehead and is similarly treated on the nape. The massive shoulders and bulging musculature are characteristic of the Etrusco-Ionian style, and the proportions as a whole may be compared with those of some of the figures supporting the shafts of a class of incense burners from Vulci. Rare & beautiful, the figure possesses a light green to a near black patina. 4 1/8" High . . . . . 7500

673. Egyptian Bronze Cat Head; 664-30 BC. The cat represented Bastet, the great cat goddess of the Egyptian Delta at Tell Bast. She represented the gentle, life-giving rays of the sun which helped the crops. Head has a reddish-brown & light green patina. 2 1/2" High . . . . . 4500

674. Minoan Double Handled Vase; Late Minoan Ib Style, 1450 BC. From Gournia. A rare and fantastic specimen which varies in style to the more frequently found vases at Knossos of the same period. The vase depicts two wonderfully painted octopi with glaring eyes. The tentacles of the two creatures wave all over the buff surface of the vase. The vase is intact with minor chipping to the rim. The paint has flaked but is stable and still impressive. 8 1/2" High, 7 1/2" Wide . . . . . 3500

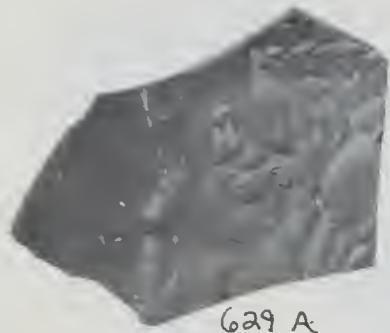

675. Roman Bronze Statuette of the Three-Headed Dog, Cerberus, or Hades' guard dog. Cerberus was the twelfth and final labour of Hercules. The figure has a green to dark grey patina and erosion to the right side of the face. 30 x 28 mm . . . . . 1200
